

Defense Security Service Alert

This warning is being passed throughout the military services and DoD

Defense Security Service Alert

- ◆ The Defense Security Service has issued the following notice regarding

ClearedPeople.com

Defense Security Service Alert

- ◆ A public website is attempting to identify people with active security clearances.
- ◆ The approach is to appear as a recruiter and the site promises to find jobs for anyone who submits their information.

Defense Security Service Alert

- ◆ They could be associated with a hostile intelligence service that is trying to find out who has security clearances for possible recruitment.
- ◆ Good OPSEC would dictate that you don't advertise your security clearance status to anyone who doesn't need to know.

Defense Security

Service Alert

- ◆ <http://www.ClearedPeople.com>
is to be avoided.
- ◆ DO NOT RESPOND TO ANY E-MAILS OF THIS TYPE OR REGISTER AT THIS WEB SITE.

Defense Security

Service Alert

- ◆ E-mails look like: "If you have an active Security Clearance then please let ClearedPeople.com begin to work for you."
- ◆ ClearedPeople is not the first head hunter to try this approach - but they are probably the most blatant. MilitaryHire.com also highlights clearances as a marketing ploy, but they don't solicit like ClearedPeople.com